Active Travel

Then and Now

Bike Shelter

More active. More often.

Then / Where we started

In 2021, Lyndale Secondary College used Active Schools funding to encourage more students to ride to school. A secure bike shelter and innovative 'Tag On' system were introduced to track journeys, reward participation and build enthusiasm for Active Travel.

Now / What has changed

Active Travel continues to thrive without additional funding, supported by committed staff and school leadership. More students are riding to school, developing confidence and pride in their achievements. Dedicated bike lanes also provide opportunities to practise cycling and road safety skills.

What the School Did

- Installed secure bike storage and introduced the 'Tag On' system to reward Active Travel.
- Created on-site bike lanes with road markings and traffic signs.
- Embedded Active Travel into the school culture through strong staff leadership and role modelling.
- Maintained an Active Schools Coordinator position to support ongoing initiatives.
- Planned future additions, including a modular riding track, student-led bike servicing club and staff professional learning.

What Others can Learn

Sustainable change comes from combining practical infrastructure, student incentives and strong staff commitment. By embedding Active Travel into school culture and providing opportunities to develop cycling confidence, schools can create lasting participation without relying on ongoing funding.

> "The school is building a culture of Active Travel that extends beyond the campus, shaping lifelong habits and influencing community-wide transport practices."

Lyndale Secondary College